

HIGHLAND

Highland Single Malts are the whiskies produced on the islands (which also include sub-categories of Island and Speyside) around the perimeter of Scotland, with the exception of Islay. Confusingly, the area also includes certain lowland areas in the Northeast of the country such as Banffshire and Aberdeenshire.

Speyside single malts are single malt Scotch whiskies, distilled in Strathspey, the area around the River Spey in Moray and Badenoch and Strathspey, in northeastern Scotland; the northeastern coastal area of the Highland region. Housing the two best-selling single malt whiskies in the world, The Glenlivet & Glenfiddich, Speyside has the greatest number of distilleries of any of the whisky producing areas of Scotland.

ISLAY

Islay whisky is made on Islay (pronounced eye-luh) or Ìle in Gaelic, the southernmost of the Inner Hebridean Islands located off the west coast of Scotland. There are eight active distilleries on the island, as of early 2008, with a ninth being made ready for production. Islay is a center of "whisky tourism", and hosts a "Festival of Malt and Music" known as Fèis Ìle each year at the end of May, with events and tastings celebrating the cultural heritage of the island.

LOWLAND

Lowland Single Malts once having a number of whisky producers, now only has three operating distilleries: Glenkinchie, near Edinburgh; Auchentoshan, near Clydebank; and Bladnoch in Galloway. Traditionally, Lowland Single Malts are triple distilled (though this has not been true of all of them), often giving them a lighter taste.
